

Table of Contents

Chapter I – The Methodological Background . . . . .	7
1. Introduction . . . . .	7
2. The formative period of oral-formulaic studies . . . . .	9
3. The classical oral-formulaic theory between 1928 and 1960. . . . .	11
4. The impact of the classic oral-formulaic theory on medieval studies until the 1960s. . . . .	12
5. The development of oral-formulaic studies from the 1970s . . . . .	18
6. The basic methodological assumptions for analysis. . . . .	34
Chapter II – Tail-rhyme – the Classic Template: Sir Launfal, Erl of Tolous and Sir Tryamour . . . . .	55
1. Introduction . . . . .	55
2. Sir Launfal . . . . .	61
3. Erl of Tolous . . . . .	106
4. Sir Tryamour . . . . .	142
5. General conclusions . . . . .	170
Chapter III – Amis and Amiloun – the Sophisticated Form of the Formulaic Tail-rhyme Romance . . . . .	174
Chapter IV – The Formulaic Tradition in a Predominantly Literate Romance – The Case of the Stanzaic Morte Arthur . . . . .	213
Chapter V – The Formulaic Aspect of Poetic Composition in the Alliterative Morte Arthure . . . . .	254
Conclusion. . . . .	296
Bibliography. . . . .	301
Index of Proper Names . . . . .	310